BOWMAN GRAY SCHOOL OF MEDICINE
WAKE FOREST COLLEGE
WINSTON-SALEM, NORTH CAROLINA

PREFACE

On the following pages are some of the ingredients of memories stored during a school year at the Bowman Gray School of Medicine of Wake Forest College.

Remote from the clashing of a hectic world—the furor of Washington scandals, riots in Egypt, Vishinsky vituperations, and Korean bottle cries—the medical school has seen another customarily quiet year. Yet it has been an eventful one.

The year marked the beginning of a second decade of service to the sick by the Bowman Gray School of Medicine and the affiliated Baptist Hospital. The summer of 1951 saw the formal beginning of construction of a 150-bed addition to the present hospital plant. In the fall President Truman flew down from Washington to take part in the official groundbreaking ceremony for Greater Wake Forest College held on the campus site at Reynolda.

In October a great loss to this institution and its students was incurred by the death of Dr. Vann.

Then too, the year will be remembered for many routine chores and pleasures that filled it . . .

DEDICATED TO . . .

ROBERT LINDSAY McMILLAN, M. D.

Possessing many talents and an unusual faculty for combining industry and relaxation, Dr. McMillan does not ever have to be a Walter Mitty to derive pleasure and satisfaction from living.

As Professor of Clinical Internal Medicine in the Bowman Gray School of Medicine, he is widely recognized as a top-flight internist and cardiologist. In this capacity, he packs in a full schedule between his office in the Private Diagnostic Clinic, lectures in the medical school, EKG readings in the Heart Station, daily ward rounds, staff meetings, medical conventions, and clinical research. He is certified by the American Board of Internal Medicine and also by its Sub-specialty Board on Cardiovascular Disease; he is a member of Alpha Omega Alpha, a Fellow of the American College of Physicians, and belongs to the American Medical Association and numerous other medical societies.

At home he and Mrs. McMillan are kept busy with Sara, age 12, Robert Lindsay, Jr., age 9, and Mary Graham, age 4.

And then not only is he an authority on flower gardening (he specializes in camellias and azaleas) but also he can describe in detail the technique of surfcasting for red drum and the fishing prospects in numerous lake and river retreats haunted by the black bass.

Having cultivated an effortless balance between vocation and avocation, Dr. McMillan is a master of the art of gracious living.

In the hubbub of medical school life where "spastic" is prone to become a standard byword among medical students, even casual contacts with "Doctor Bob" provide a refreshing relief from any sense of strain. And on any matter—from chronic auricular fibrillation to the Winston-Salem Cardinals—we can always depend on him for a reliable and leisurely consultation.

It is with utmost pleasure that the Senior Class of the Bowman Gray School of Medicine dedicates this yearbook to Dr. Robert McMillan.

In Memoriam

Dr. Herbert Moffett Vann

1893-1951

Dr. Vann, professor of anatomy in the Bowman Gray School of Medicine and beloved friend of the medical students who had known him, died Sunday afternoon, October 14, 1951, at the North Carolina Baptist Hospital following a week of illness caused by coronary occlusion.

Dr. Vann was born in Danville, Virginia, on February 8, 1893. He attended Mars Hill and Wake Forest College, receiving his B.S. from Wake Forest in 1915 and his M.A. in 1916. He attended Jefferson Medical College and received his M.D. there in 1917. Following overseas service in World War I as a First Lieutenant in the Medical Corps, he returned to Wake Forest College and served as Professor of Anatomy in its medical school from 1919 to 1951, except for two years as assistant professor of anatomy at Tulane Medical School, 1926-1928. In addition, he organized the medical detachment of the 113th Field Artillery of the North Carolina National Guard and served as major in charge until 1940. Surviving him are his wife, the former Miss Mildred Arzani of Ansonia, Pennsylvania; his son, Dr. Robert L. Vann, assistant resident in pediatrics at the North Carolina Baptist Hospital; his daughter, Mrs. James I. Waller of Winston-Salem; his sister, Mrs. William D. Irvin of Salzburg, Austria; and his two brothers, Rev. Luther R. Vann of Roanoke, Virginia, and Capt. John W. Vann, MC, USN, of Coronado, California.

The impact of this great man's life and spirit could perhaps best be appreciated by a glimpse at the sum total of the memories of him cherished by all of us, his medical students. To the students during his teaching lifetime, Dr. Vann and his course in human anatomy were practically the embodiment of the medical school of Wake Forest College.

As early as premedical days, bull sessions about medical school in smoky fraternity rooms, at Sunday School luncheons, and in crowded cafes sooner or later centered on Dr. Vann. Whenever a delegation would come from the medical school to interview prospective students in undergraduate school, Dr. Vann would be the first person to be singled out. The consensus, in any case, was that although with stern pedagogy he required thorough mastery of the 1300-odd pages of Gray's Anatomy, he knew more about entering medical students than anyone else in school and was actually their closest friend.

No consideration of Dr. Vann would be complete without watching him survey one by one a class of freshman medical students as they would take their places in the anatomy dissecting room, dressed in their starched, untarnished lab coats and armed with their fresh crackling editions of Gray's Anatomy. Dr. Vann expected and received a great deal from his medical students. He expected them to be in their places and ready for work at 8:30 AM; he expected them to work diligently at all times and set a high mark for themselves. He continually stressed their privilege in being in medical school; and he treated them with dignity and expected from them a mature, sincere conduct.

Through the years we will recall many familiar scenes with Dr. Vann. We will recall not only somewhat terrifying moments in quiz sessions, but also his cheery greetings from his office as we passed by in the hallway, his occasional beckonings to see a gorgeous autumn scene from his window, and his enthusiasm before a Wake Forest Homecoming football game. But most of all, we will remember that Dr. Vann not only knew the full name of everyone of us who studied under him but also knew our every eccentricity and capability and was our confidant and counselor in many problems.

Whenever in the future we may be tempted to make shabby compromises with our professional and personal integrity, we will be prompted by the memory of "The Major" always upholding standards of discipline and duty.

ADMINISTRATION

The Bowman Gray School of Medicine is the medical school of Wake Forest College and an expansion of the two-year school at Wake Forest founded in 1902. The name was changed by action of the Board of Trustees in recognition of the benefaction of the late Bowman Gray, Sr., who left provision of funds in his will which were awarded to Wake Forest College, making the establishment of the four-year medical school possible. Although presently separated from the parent institution, the dean in his administrative capacity is responsible to the President of Wake Forest College and, through him, to the Board of Trustees of Wake Forest College.

The North Carolina Baptist Hospital, the main teaching hospital of the medical school since 1941, was founded in 1923.

The activities of the two institutions, both operated under the Baptist State Convention of North Carolina, are integrated and correlated in the best interests of medical education and medical care.

X-RAY TECHNOLOGY

the STUDY of STRUCTURE and FUNCTION

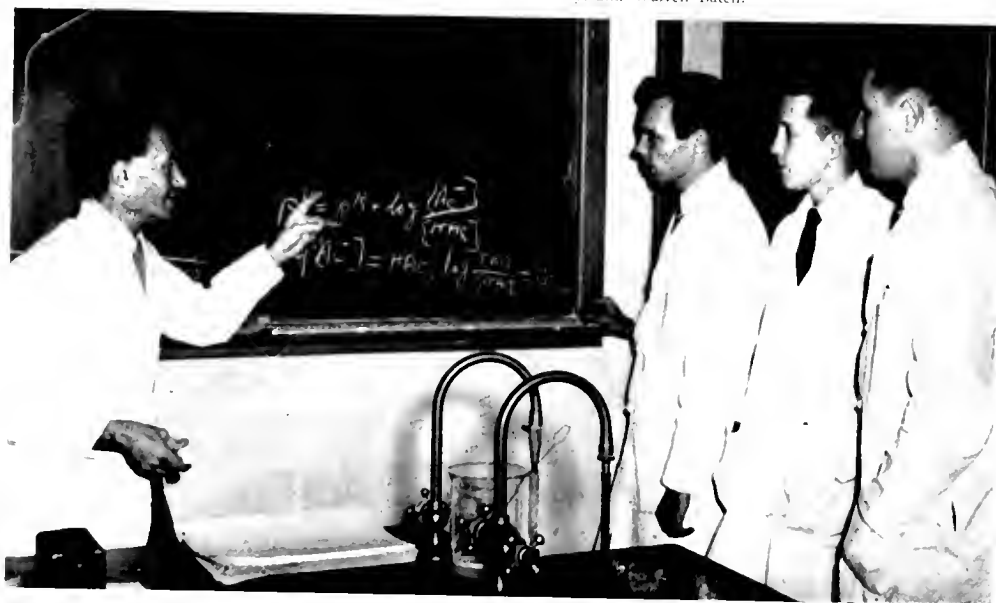

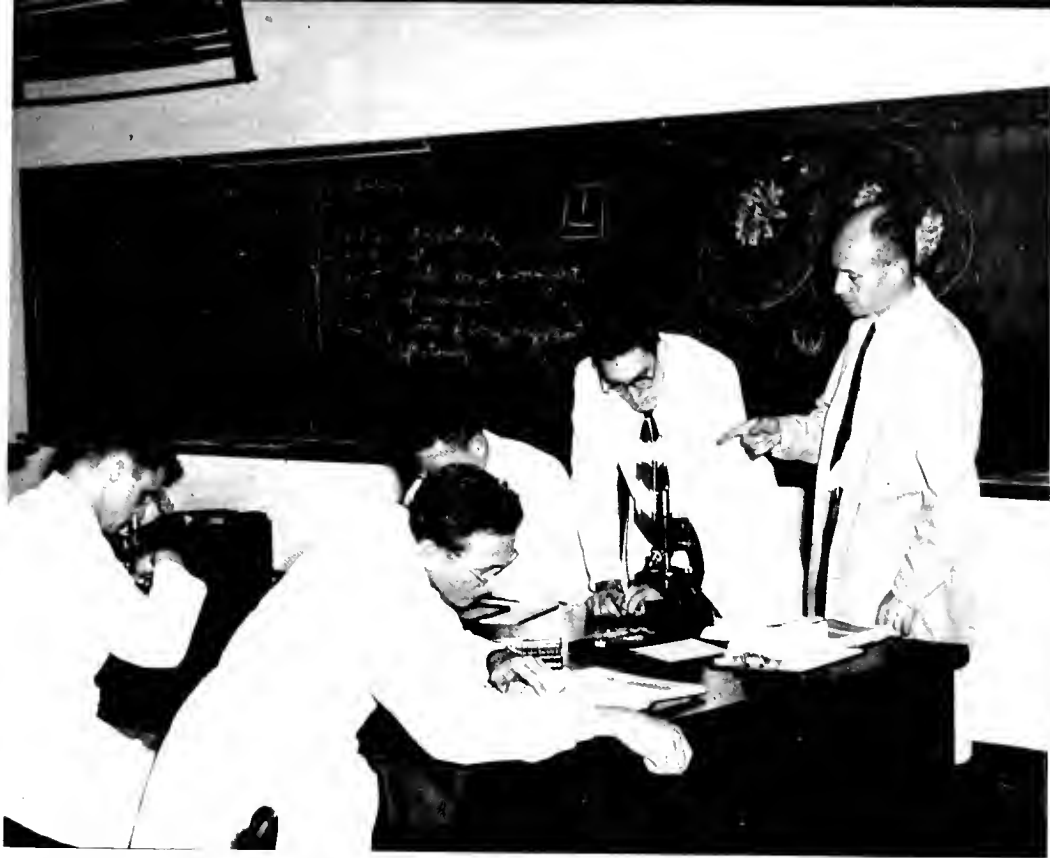

Dr. Beamer takes a moment off his lecture on pathology, Barnes Hospital, and the White House to examine a tissue in question for Ray Scala.

Dr. Moorhead's lectures in special pathology are always highlights of the sophomore year. Here he is closely followed by Marshall, Jackson, McLeoul, Moss, Miller, McCuen, Moore, and Keach.

The Henderson-Hasselbach equation is just one of the hurdles faced by freshmen in biochemistry. Dr. Artom explains its derivation to Keith Edwards, Bob Bradley, and Warren Batell.

The study of normal cellular structure is an indispensable prerequisite for the study of pathology. Here Dr. Richard Groat clarifies the features of normal cardiovascular tissue for Wally Vreeland, Charlie Sykes, John Spargo, and Paul Walter industriously press on.

At some point in physiology, the mechanics and clinical application of the EKG is a mystery to most medical students. Dr. Bond explains a typical tracing to Bob Carney, young Philmore Robinson, and Walt Greene.

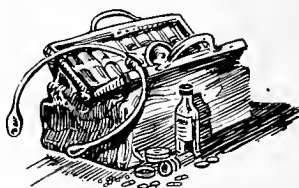

Many a rough spot during the first two years is eased by the patient instruction of Drs. Bob and Dot Tuttle. Don Hayes and Chuck Moore try their patience for a moment in parasitology.

SENIOR SAGA or what you will . . .

It all seemed to start back there in the latter part of September 1948 when we assembled for Orientation Week at the Bowman Gray School of Medicine. We may not have constituted the world's greatest collection of intellects but we could have won a score of grand prizes for our collection of characters. It is perhaps banal for every historian to talk about what a bunch of personalities there were in the celebrated class of '01 back at dear old Dingleberry U., etc., but in our particular class this sort of thing is simply too striking a fact to be trite. Take the Hutchison Household, for instance, which at one time or other housed Tom Holder, Russ Howell, Conan Roberts, Roy Inscore, George Barrett, Vance Byrum, Charles Robinson, Bob O. Duncan, and Bob Mayfield. Nevertheless, as a group, we managed to work together remarkably well and, in spite of our griping, we had a whale of a good time during our four years in med school.

It took a while after Orientation Week for us to realize that we still had to take notes, ease up on the shows, and refrain from calling our professors by their first names. Bopsey even forgot about golfing for a while. By that time we had just about got to the brachial plexus, Clarence could close his eyes and visualize only the first 500 pages of Gray's anatomy, Simmons was frightening us with an intellectual effort that required the remaining 3½ years for him to recuperate from, and Hardaway could date every night, go to Greenville on the week ends, and still make 100 on the quiz sessions. The next two quarters (as well as most of the 2nd year, for that matter) were practically all Clarence Gantt's show. With the help of a keen mind, tremendous will, a faded plaid shirt, and Abbott Laboratories, Clarence turned out an academic performance that could hardly be surpassed in any medical school.

SENIOR SAGA or what you will . . .

In the spring quarter of the first year Dr. Richard Groat came into our class. Naturally, this afforded bull session topic for a long time. As Associate Professor of Anatomy and Director of the Department of Anatomy, he was bound to take a long trip down to earth to join us. But it wasn't long before we found him to be not only a really swell guy but also our staunchest spokesman for more freedom in medical education. Then too, in the spring quarter there was Dr. Dot Tuttle. With disarming patience and kindness she skilfully guided us through bacteria, fungi, rickettsiae, and viruses in a fashion that left us nothing to gripe about at the Steak House on Saturday nights.

The following year found each of us a little more assured and loaded with gags for scaring the freshmen but still nobody's doctor by a long shot. At this time we were introduced to Dr. Parker Beamer. Official ceremonies were held on 14 October 1949 at 10:00 AM when every last one of us (including Dr. Groat, J. T., and Bessie Kay, mind you) broke out a cigar during one of Dr. Beamer's lectures and filled Room 224 with an aroma that must have staggered even him a little bit.

During the winter quarter we put on the big push and wrapped up our physiology "theses" as well as the grueling hours with pathology, pharmacology, and physiology lectures and labs. Then we started to think about who to buy our uniforms from for the next year on the wards and what kind of diagnostic equipment to get. Naturally, Gobel wanted us to buy everything through him—and Charlie Medlin wanted us to buy through him. We ended up about half and half, greeted new-arrival Joyce Reynolds, and sailed into Dr. Cayer's physical diagnosis and Dr. Hutaff's hematology.

We will long remember Dr. Cayer's reading of Voltaire's Zadig and its impression on us. Drs. Starling and Myers steered us in surgery. During the spring quarter we also found an unexpected amount of free time—and used it fully. There were soft ball games out at Miller Park, tennis tournaments, various parties, slight boning for the State Boards, and not as much general study as we had counted on. But it felt good after the winter quarter.

Then came the long-awaited journey up on the wards and new arrivals from Ole Miss—Duncan and Mayfield, Carolina—Hardison, and North Dakota—Erbele, Humphrey, Leigh, Miller, Ruland, and Tarnasky.

Any illusions we may have entertained about our really being "Doctors" were quickly dispelled by our first few frenetic weeks on the floors. Nothing seemed to work out right. Charlie Medlin will tell you how much trouble he had trying to convince Bob Duncan that blood asphalts were done only on Sunday. Finally, we got fairly well acclimated to the new environs, however, and we were able to start fluids after only three or four tries, catch our pages without wilting on the spot, and do a history without referring to the forms. Dr. Lock even called on Sierinty for a comment in CPC one night and Dr. Cayer cited the brilliant laboratory work done by iii cc Bob A. Team on a jaundiced patient. In between times, Quimby was making good progress with his piano practice, Murgatroyd had convinced us that he could do the Charleston better than anyone else around here, Boettner was occasionally popping a lung cyst or two, and Gobel had to take intravenous ACTH for an urticarial condition in which allergy to money was definitely ruled out. The end of the junior year found us variously placed. Many worked over at City, George Barrett—prominent Bowman Gray physiologist—was over at Forsyth County Clinic, Eisenberg was considering hormonal aspects of the ladies around here for a research project with Dr. Jerry Aikawa, Bessie Kay was over at Martinsville, and others of us goofed off—much to the dismay of Fireman Jack Felts.

Finally, the senior year had rolled around and we wondered if we really knew anything at all. Bitler knew something. He assured Dr. Caver up in Medical OPD that the function of the kidneys is to make urine. Pediatric rounds pretty well undermined what little clinical savoir faire we had developed; but it was worth it for the top-notch teaching we got plus side-lines on Junior's mommy, fried unicorn horn, and the 13-lined ground squirrel. Over in Ob-Gyn Showmer made a big hit with Dr. Adams, Dr. Burt described the technique on Brownie points, and a thumb belonging to a 4th year clinical clerk showed up in pathology along with a uterus and a set of adnexae.

Then came the furor about internships, the matching plan, etc., ad nauseam during which time opinions were a dime a dozen but nobody knew just what was going on. Finally, most of us had joined the "Plan" and in spite of pro's and con's about "deals" we ended up with a fairly interesting array of internships, including 14 appointments to City.

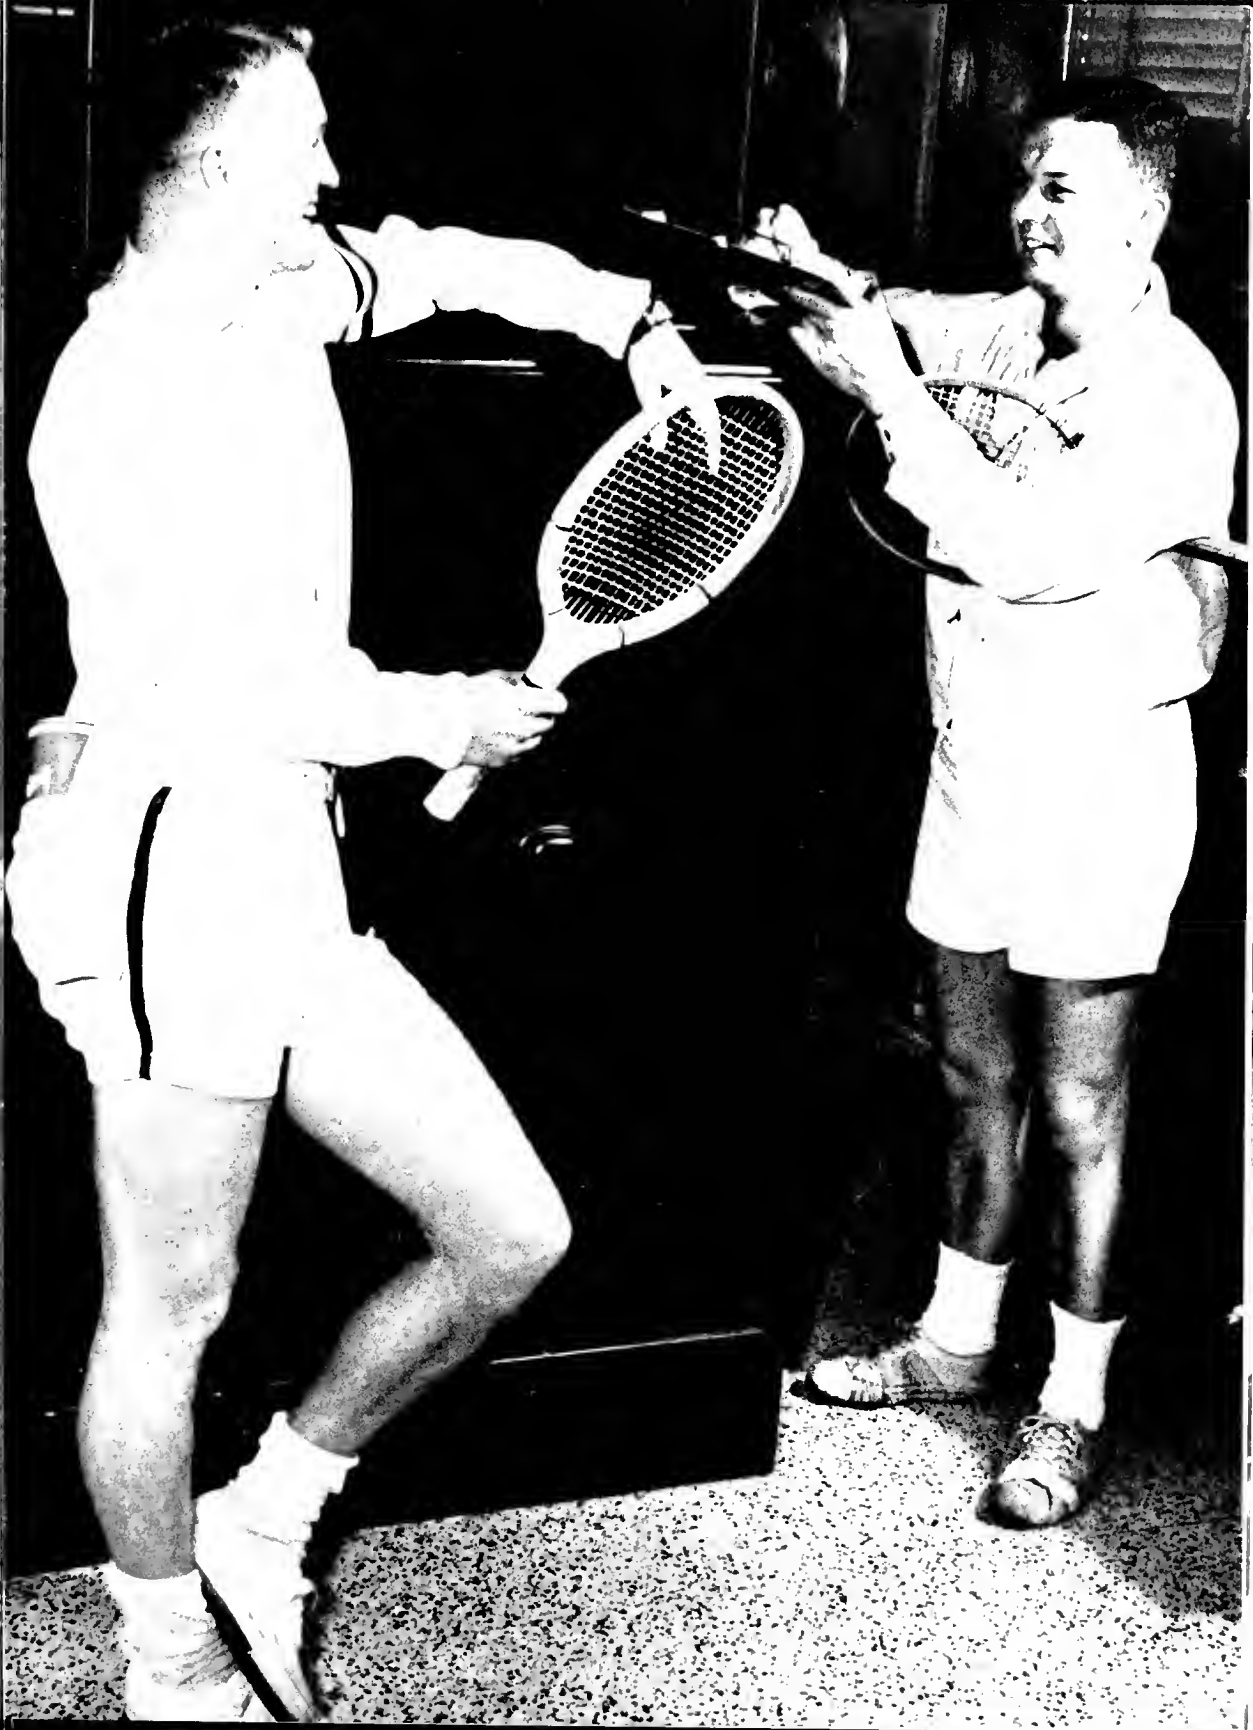

Well, there you have some of it. It's not the whole story by a long shot. The real class history is what each of you will remember about Bowman Gray from 1948 to 1952, not what anybody puts down in black and white.

The Publications Board, which was created this year, is designed to promote maximum efficiency in the production of the Journal of the Bowman Gray School of Medicine and of the yearbook GRAY AND WHITE MATTER, and to co-ordinate student management with the school administration in regard to matters of finance and general policy. The members of the Board are composed of a chairman, arbitrarily the Vice-President of the Student Body, faculty advisers, and the editors and business managers of the two publications respectively. The members outlined early in the year a set of regulations in regard to the structure and function of the Board which was approved by the Student Body and incorporated into its Constitution.

Honor Medical Society

BETA CHAPTER

The Alpha Omega Alpha Honor Medical Society was founded by William W. Root at the College of Medicine of the University of Illinois in 1902. The Beta Chapter of North Carolina had its inception when installation exercises were held at the Old Town Club in Winston-Salem on November 19, 1948.

The aims of the society are the promotion of scholarship and research in medical schools, the encouragement of a high standard of character and conduct among medical students and graduates, and the recognition of high attainment in medical science.

SPORTS

Many a balmy sunny day will find such stalwarts as Ralph Bland, Quincy Simmons, and the tan-haired, All South African Bill Uthlaut plying their talents on the hospital tennis courts.

Neither the curriculum nor the physical facilities at the Bowman Gray School of Medicine are conducive to an extensive sports program. Nevertheless, there are opportunities for a plenty of wholesome diversion for those who want it. In the immediate neighborhood there are two asphalt tennis courts and the intern's lounge (referred to by Boettner as "The Research Center"), which offers pool and ping-pong. Then, on pretty days, golfing at one of the city links is always a big attraction.

The various classes and the two fraternities frequently manage to work in tag football, basketball and softball during the year. The Athletic Council, headed this year by Howard Wainer, has directed participation by Bowman Gray teams in the city league sports events. Particularly outstanding was the record compiled by the med school basketball team in the Commercial League. Placing third in regular season competition, the team beat previously-undefeated Tuttle Lumber Company in the play-offs and ended up second in the league, losing to Lewisville in the finals.

LOOKING BACK OVER THE YEAR . . .

To be sure, some big things happened during the year. First of all, in the summer formal construction on the new wing of the hospital was begun and the slamming of pile drivers, the discussions by foremen, and the clonking of hammers reminded us of progress through the year. Then in October, President Harry S. Truman erected big news for Wake Forest College and Winston-Salem in coming down from Washington to the official groundbreaking ceremony where he made a major address and lifted a whopping shovelfull of dirt off the campus site out at Reynolda.

But the things that most of us will still remember the best of all will be the numerous events around the hospital and medical school that we saw and took part in. For the Freshmen and Sophomores, there were anatomy quizzes, biochemistry labs, smoking of kymograph drums, pathology lectures, quandaries about what book to buy for Physical Diagnosis, autopsy write-ups, and sleepless nights before big correlated quizzes the next day. For the Junior and Seniors, there were such things as the first venipuncture on the wards, cardiac work-ups, scrubbing for operation the first time, 24-hour OB duty, recording some lab data incorrectly on pediatrics, and waiting for the station wagon to go to Graylyn.

Back at the Bowman Gray School of Medicine, things went along pretty much as usual. On the left Bill Strickland finally demonstrates mastery of the technique of smoking kymograph drums. On the right, Mr. Parsons dependable corrector of confusion in the physiology lab, routes a couple of circuits for a new experiment.

Various little nooks and crannies around the hospital became regular stomping grounds for us. For instance, Mary Louise Lowe's Book Store. Aside from texts on everything from ophthalmology to integral calculus, the Book Store offered a delightful soft chair, the daily paper and a conversation on anything under the sun at any time. Then there was Paul and Rose Hamrick's Soda Shop. From morning to night, the Soda Shop was the place for that five-minute-between-lectures break, the coffee and doughnut if you didn't eat breakfast, and the earliest poop on Dick Tracy, Lil Abner, and affairs in general. In the locker room, we swapped our gags and some of us wolfed down our packed lunches there during the noon hour. More along business lines, there were the numerous labs—hematology, bacteriology, toxicology, and serology—where we took our request forms and our troubles. Sooner or later we ended up at the library to run through a bunch of references, to look up the pharmacology of Ranthine, to catch a ten-minute siesta, or just have a chat with Nell and Joanne.

We will surely remember the patience of the remarkable switchboard crew who kept us out of trouble more than we knew—Mrs. Connell, Katherine, Mrs. Carter, Polly, Mrs. Craver, and Mrs. Leigh. When we remember the music in the 3rd floor student lab, we'll think of Dr. Dennison. In later years some of us will reminisce on the 10:30 Chowder and Marching Society of the Dining Hall Crew and ponder the reasons for its dissolution. The Phi Chi's will wonder what became of old Pete.

Then there were the usual social events during the year. Lindsay Getzen got the "Snake Pit" fixed up for the Phi Chi shindies and entertained on the bass for a Phi Rho frolic one time. Every now and then we sneaked off down town to the show or to the bowling alley for a game of duck pins. It was rumored that Bob McIntee had been seen out at Salem College. Many a Saturday night saw groups down at Ardmore and the Steak House, busily airing their pet gripes and peevces.

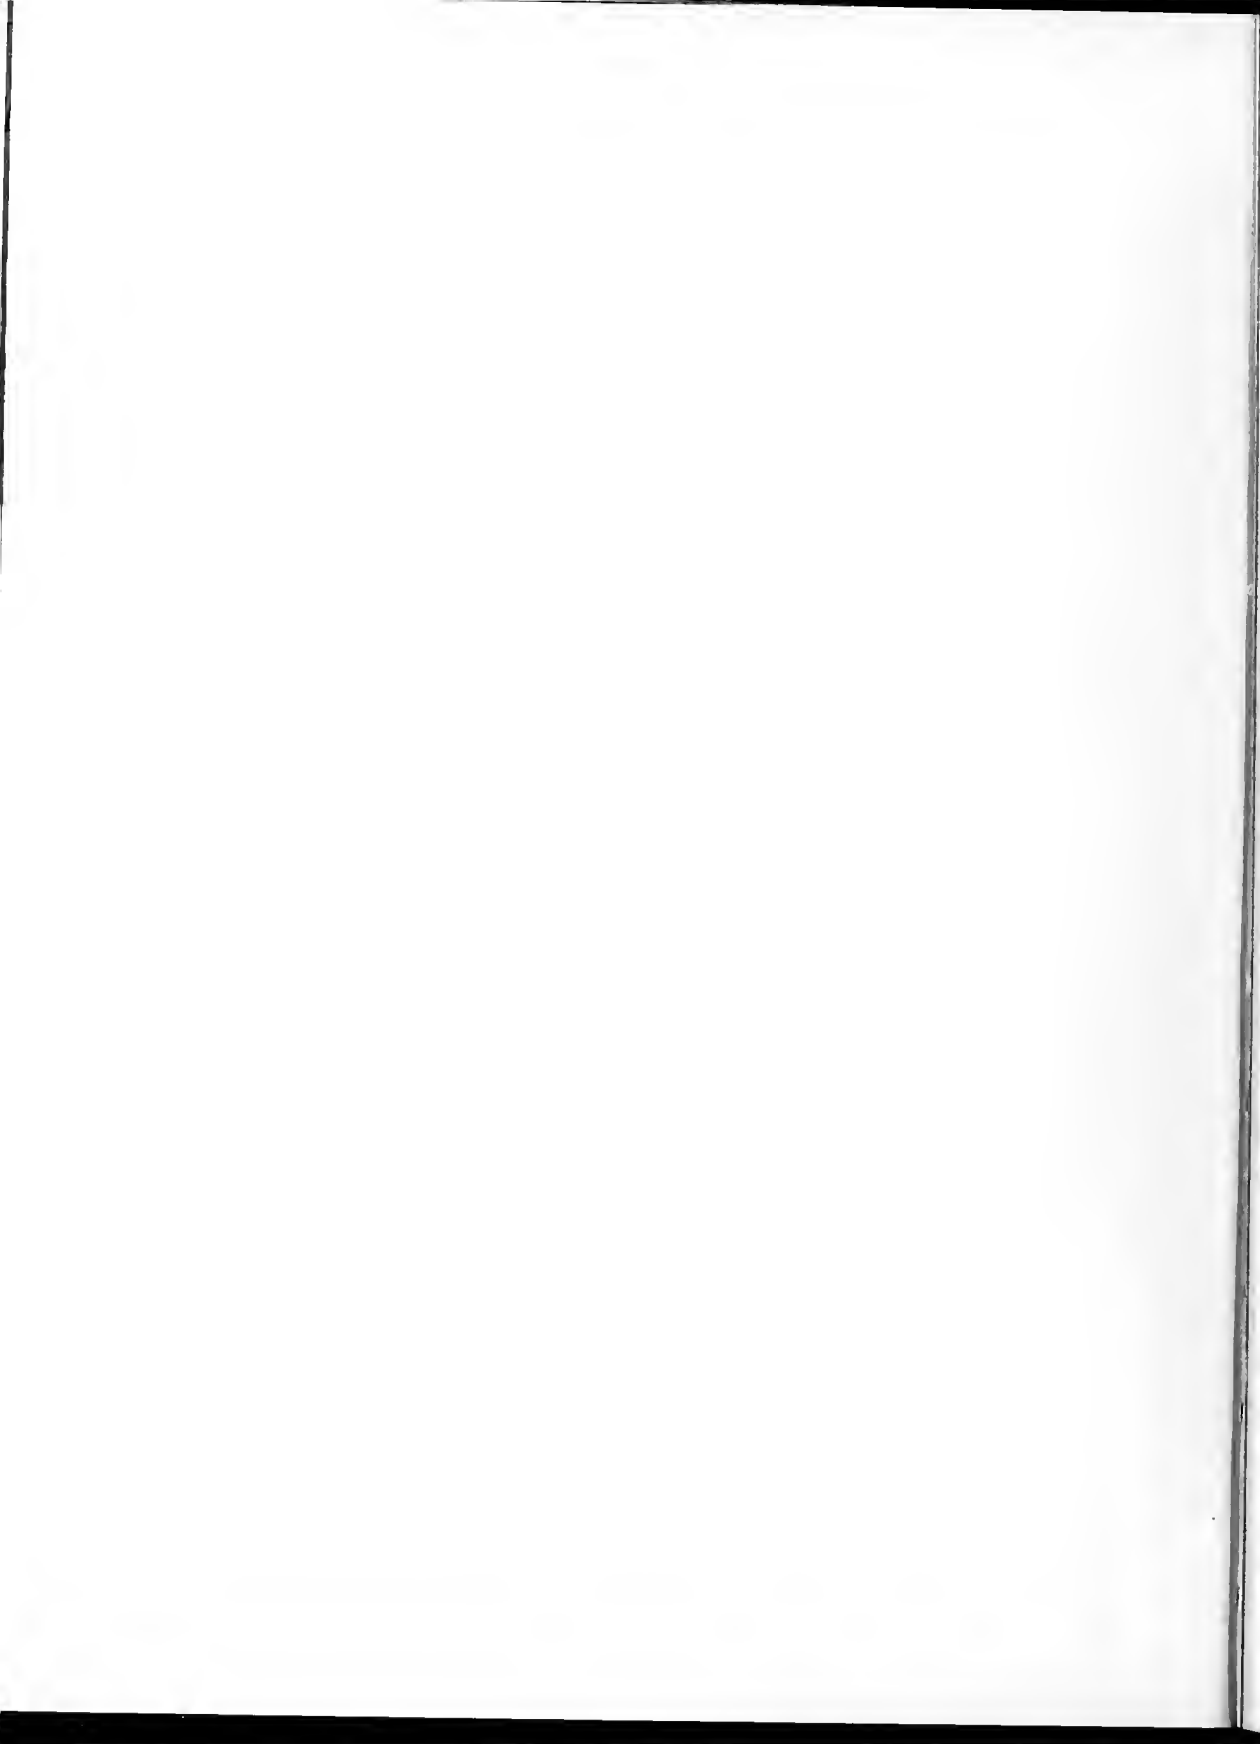

From time to time we will think back on the school year 1951-1952. More than likely, we will agree that it was a good year . . .

Mrs. Craver and Mrs. Connell patiently page an errant medical student.

SCHOOL OF NURSING
WINSTON-SALEM, NORTH CAROLINA

PREFACE

In the words of Dr. Osler, "Nursing as an art to be cultivated, as a profession to be followed, is modern; nursing as a practice originated in the dim past." We have, in choosing nursing as our profession, become devoted to a cause thro' knowledge and intelligent service. It is a part of us that each will grow during her training period like the mighty oak—deeply rooted, lofty, broadly spreading, sheltering, enduring, living and growing, beautiful and fruitful.

The 1951-52 White Matter—in which we have tried to portray the hours . . . the days . . . and the year—emerges, a cherished memory of an eventful year, with carefully chosen subjects captured in their familiar settings. As our "hypo", bubbling over with school spirit, finds its way into our pages to prick your memory of the "never-to-be-forgottens" we've imprisoned here, may you once more recapture some of those fleeting moments.

Faye and Marilyn

DEDICATION

To Chaplain Richard K. Young, whose friendship through these three years has proved both constant and enriching, we the class of 1952 dedicate this book.

His generous, unselfish spirit has provided us with treasured experiences and opportunities, and his very character and personality embody the high ideals of our school and hospital.

His faithful efforts devoted to the wholehearted promotion of the finest in Christian teaching and in the development of Christian personalities have endeared him to each of us; for his untiring endeavors to broaden our vision of the spiritual realm in its relation to nursing and medicine through the psychomatic approach, we feel it fitting and proper that we pay him this tribute.

Because we shall never forget him as the student nurses' friend, we take great pride in presenting the 1952 White Matter in his esteemed behalf.

RICHARD K. YOUNG

"The sweetest and most inoffensive path of life leads through the avenues of science and learning; and whoever can either remove any obstruction in this way, or open up any new prospect, ought so far to be esteemed a benefactor to mankind."

CLASS HISTORY

Almost three years ago N. C. Baptist Hospital took on a tremendous task—that of making professional nurses of us fifty-three starry-eyed, unknowing and unsuspecting maidens who set up living quarters on their premises that rainy Wednesday of August 31, 1949. Only very shortly after our arrival did the proper authorities begin exhibiting their authority. With our first lessons on "How to Study" (and a plentiful assortment of material to practice on) we responded by putting away our tennis rackets, date dresses, et cetera until later when we could possibly and purposefully give out of studying material. Those were the days when Kat's last words became famous: "Where is that man that's gonna marry me and take me away from all this?"

It wasn't easy—that preclinical period—but even with Becky's escapades with the obstetrician's son, and Alice's constant shift of admirers and sometimes "steadies"—predominantly Junior med. students—we made the grade. Participation in caping exercises at Ardmore Baptist Church on February 28, 1950 was sufficient verification that our behavior and ward work had not been too unacceptable. As a result we convinced ourselves that the more you learn, the more you forget! so why study? Out came the canasta cards, tennis rackets, and briefs for sunbathing. Toots got a beautiful tan.

With summer came those long awaited vacations and our first stab at night duty, associated from the beginning with Leonard's midnight pranks. September I saw us as Juniors with Marilyn succeeding Helen Elrod as class president. The battle of O.B. and O.R. was on. Sterile technique and scrubbing became routine, and soon threading sutures and having babies was old stuff to us. We had won, only to become engaged in another battle: sponsoring a Junior-Senior Prom. All our creative efforts and industrious energies were more than rewarded as we found our way on the evening of May 19 to the ballroom of the Robert E. Lee Hotel, with Jimmy Myers' Orchestra dishing out a musical mixture that made the evening unforgettable. Kat's flight to Boston as a delegate to the N.L.N.E. convention from the State Student Nurses Association was another May event.

A glorious three weeks' vacation rolled 'round for each of us with the termination of classes. Dreams were fulfilled at beach parties and on mountain retreats; Irene, Marilyn, Dolly, and Elaine can vouch for both. Faye maneuvered her vacation to coincide with Bert's furlough, and Dot became hospitalized in Morganton. It was an appendectomy!

Not being too reluctant for vacations to end was due to the fact that black bands were waiting to make us Seniors. Our three months at "The Hill" proved that psychiatry has its place. We're just glad they picked the place they did! Dolly liked it well enough to leave us and marry Strick. Frankie, Nan, and Littleton convinced us they should have gone before they did! To them Raleigh was even more interesting than our new T.V.!!!

Student body meetings persisted. Proctors sprang up as we became oriented to the "call-down" bill; new social privileges were effected. However, we were totally unsuccessful in our struggle for blanket permissions, and, oh, yes, with the Bendix, too!

Professional adjustments classes began with Miss Harrison bringing an inseparable friend—her crutch.

We attended sessions of the State Nurses Association in Greensboro and visited the local Red Cross Chapter House.

Various phases of Nursing was investigated chiefly through personal interviews. Charge duty demanded our application on the wards of many things we learned in this course. Temptations, such as the kind found on the left hand third finger, successfully trapped some of the class. Forty-one remained, but it was difficult for us and those who saw us through—we mean Lois and Harry . . . Marty and Dub . . . Laura Ann and Dale . . . Pat and Marvin . . . Kep and Charlie. Even though Elaine, Jane, and Irene (transfers from Longs) will don that white before the rest of us, they couldn't be more eager for graduation and their diplomas. Just ask Lulu . . . We'll hear Tommy sigh and 'Poss' will grin . . .

White Matter

Christian

The Christian Student Union is an organization of all students enrolled in the school of nursing who elect a council to lead them in their religious activities. The purposes of the C.S.U. are to unify, assist, and promote various religious activities in the school, to lead every student to participate in a local church program, and to seek to incorporate in her life those Christlike qualities that are becoming to a Christian nurse.

At the beginning of the school year, the C.S.U. began its program of welcoming the preclinicals by arranging for them to visit various churches, and having a slumber party in their honor. When the new class of medical students arrived in October, the C.S.U. sponsored a play-day and picnic for the two new classes at the student cabin.

Throughout the year, the C.S.U. has sponsored a regularly scheduled program of activities in the nursing school and hospital. Among them are Monday and Thursday night vespers for both the patients and students, pediatric Sunday School and story hour, morning and evening watch, special mission programs, and workshops.

In January, the C.S.U., along with a steering committee from the medical school, mapped out plans for the first Religious Emphasis Week among students. Dr. T. Z. Koo, leader of World Student Christian groups, led forums and discussions on the theme "The Christian Dynamic in My Profession."

Besides activities in the hospital and nursing school, the C.S.U. sponsored trips such as visiting the Mills Home with Christmas presents for each child, taking Christmas treats to a Negro school, holding worship services at the Baptist Home and County Home, and arranging visits to Woman's College Baptist Student Center in Greensboro. It also sponsored a trip to the Baptist Student Convention in Charlotte.

With its high goals and responsibilities, the Christian Student Union continues to try to reach out daily and draw every student nurse to a closer fellowship with Christ.

On Leaving

We share one central thought: we have all suffered the same things together . . . planning those weiner roasts we never had . . . getting the "low-down" on certain med-students . . . waiting anxiously for the change list to be posted . . . knowing how not to study . . . unread bulletin boards . . . radios and night duty . . . coffee and cigarettes and canasta and catty remarks . . . midnight sessions of "things we've dated" or blind dates who were really blind . . . enduring penance for coming in late . . . trying hard to be dignified . . . being impressed with our own importance. All these and a million more complete the essence of our having lived together.

OUR ALMA MATER

To our nursing school so true
Our hearts belong to you.
We'll serve you to the end
And your ideals defend.

We'll stand by you
No matter what you do
Healing pain
Whatever be the gain.

In our uniforms so white
We'll be a guiding light
To brighten up the land
And lend a helping hand.

In years to come
We'll be glad to say we're from
Our alma mater
We love you.

EDUCATED NOW?

To be sure you are, with a prized diploma to show for it! Congratulations on all those tests you've successfully passed

Now life is going to give you the supreme test of thinking for yourself. You'll hear that the political planners can manage everything for you, and give you a "secure" life. If you think that one through clearly, you will see that the most secure people you could find are the ones in jail.

You'll probably hear more about your "rights" than you do about your responsibility. Yet your teachers have warned you that every right carries with it an obligation equal or greater.
